

Disability Awareness

If you are like most people, you can run and jump, hear and see, and think clearly. Some people however, cannot do these things as well as most of us. This situation is called having a disability.

A caring community looks after the needs of all kinds of people. Look around when you are out. You'll notice special parking spots near store doors for people who have a hard time walking. Street level sidewalk corners and ramps allow people in wheel chairs to get up on sidewalks and into buildings. Special receivers and computers help people who can't see or hear to be able to use the telephone. Check out your community and write down the ways your community helps disabled people.

My community helps disabled people by having:

Order from ScoutShop.ca